Lily Shaw
W.9.
1957

Dear Lily,

Does it seem possible that the end of the year is here and we only have one exam left? It's really been a good year though and I've really enjoyed knowing you. Have a great summer and I'll see you again next year.

Love,
Nancy

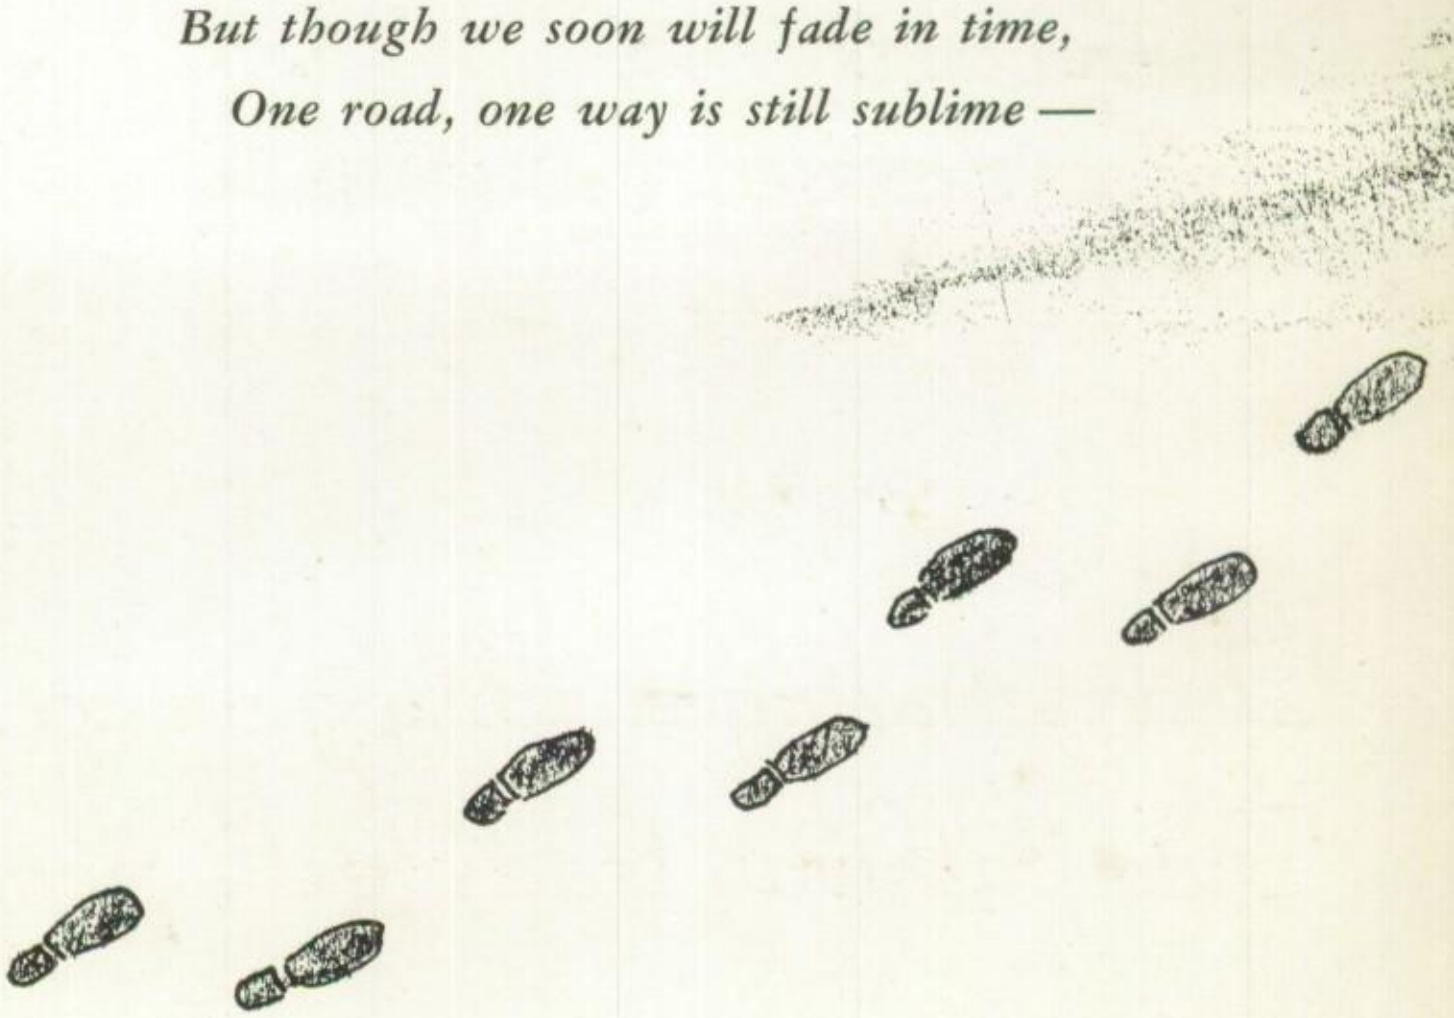
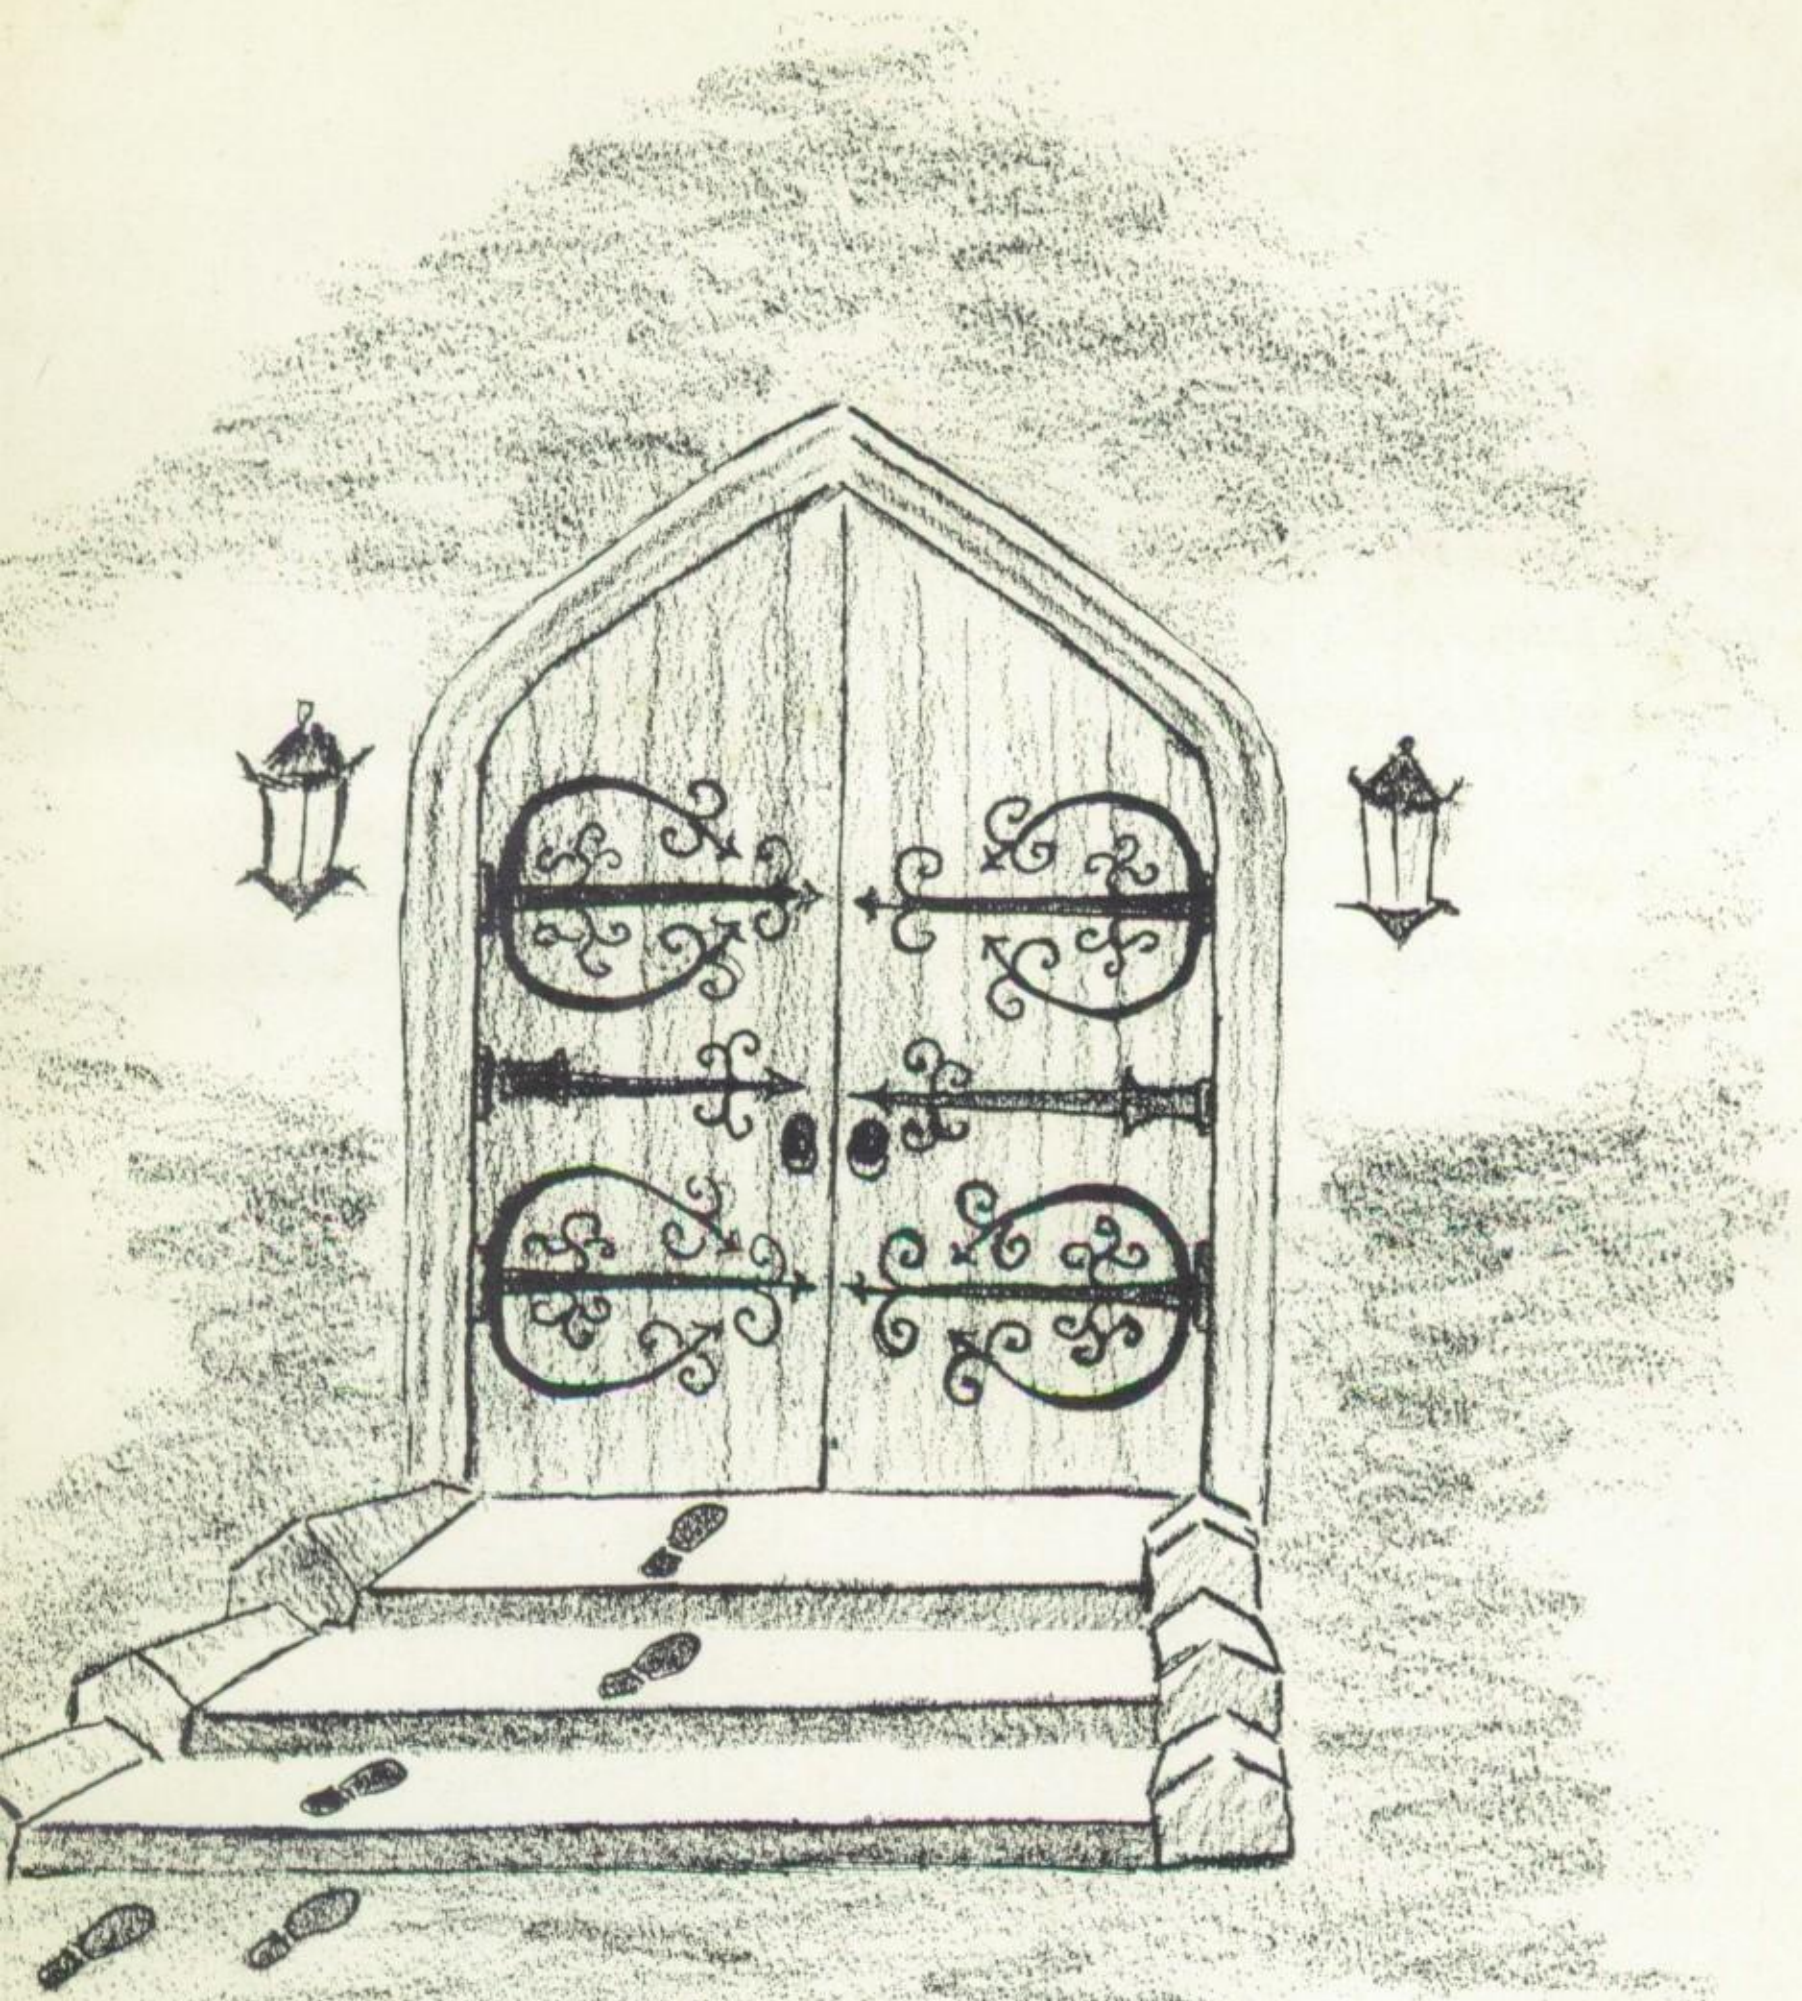
Highlights

Behind us lie the broken ways.
We walk the paths which, worn with days
And years, are free from all debris
But dusty with antiquity;
Where poets in winged sandals wrote
Upon the wind, or a soldier's boot
Trod carelessly upon a star
And crushed it beneath the heels of war—
Their marks look all the same to us.
We seek to blaze new trails across
A virgin land, unharrowed plains,
Or brave the mountainous terrains,
To raze all forests dark with doubt,
And leave our footprints framed with light.
But though we soon will fade in time,
One road, one way is still sublime —





Transcending earthly gain or loss,
This pathway leads forth from the Cross

Loved by all who know her . . .

a gracious spirit within our lives . . .

for her encouragement and her confidence in each of us . . .

for her understanding of our hopes and anxieties . . .

for the sincerity of her devotion to us . . .

We, the senior class, dedicate our yearbook to . . .

Class History

Step One

In 1953 we stood on the first landing of the long stairway to graduation. The steps above us seemed insurmountable, but as we reached each of them we took it with a sure foot. After victory over those first fearsome midyears, we went on to defeat the Moorites by warbling "Finlandia" in the interhall song contest. The dining room took on a nautical air as we sailed through our house party. While the Revell cops heard bells, the Holtonites treated their cops to food and ghost stories. Vacation at last!

Step Two

The stairway above us appeared shorter as we stepped onto the second landing. Fall was eventful: we hiked to the hills, applauded Alec Templeton, mourned the loss of the Deerfield game, and laughed with Virginia Sale. While waiting on tables at Thanksgiving, we cheered the Seniors' efforts to carve the turkeys. The last steps seemed to fly by. Soon after the Shoe Prince chose his queen, the Hermonites unveiled the 1957 banner at their annual dance. Before long, we were on our way home for the summer, looking forward to being upper classmen.

Step Three

The third landing of the stairway saw us as Juniors, at last. On Seating Day we set a precedent by escaping from our furious Seniors. For the third year, Bishop's Bread heralded Mountain Day; we trudged mile after mile after mile to the distant hills. An unusually snowy winter set the theme for our class party, "Snow Ball." Spring passed fairly uneventfully except for the planting of our maple tree. The following week, however, brought the death of a beloved faculty member, Miss Morse. The last step of the year was the traditional Lantern Service on Chapel Hill, at which we received the cherished Lights of Northfield from our Seniors.

Step Four

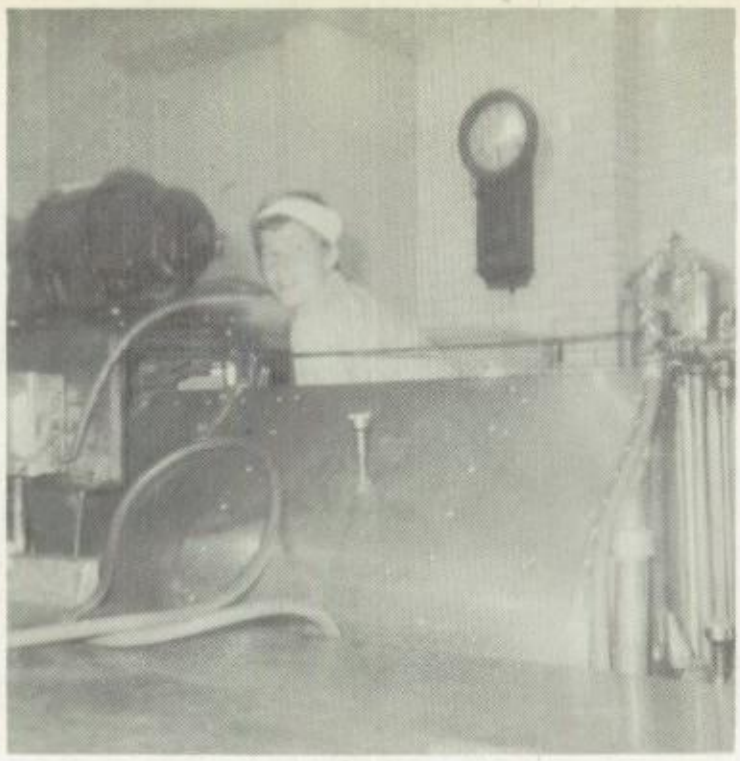
We faced the final flight full of anticipation for our Senior year. We marched to the "very front rows" on that last Seating Day, and suddenly realized that everything we would do in the next nine months would be for the last time. Particularly at Christmas Vespers were we aware of this, and many of us sang "Dost Thou Remember" with tear-filled eyes. We were too busy, however, to be constantly aware of this. "Apts" and "Boards" left us with headaches, at least, and the term paper was finished in the rush of the last minute. We donned our formals for the banquet on Class Day, and again for the "Chat," the first of the Commencement Weekend activities.

CAROLYN CENTER,
SUSANNE WRIGHT.

Step Five

Commencement was the last step of our High School years, but only the first toward the future. We had seen much accomplished: an addition to Talcott Library, a new dormitory, and the long-awaited Thanksgiving vacation. Who can tell what the future will hold?

The Three Musketeers.



What?

Dear Lily,
Even though I didn't get to see you as much as I'd like to this year, I know you have been a great help to everyone around you. Even though I won't be here next year, I'll always remember you and with great affection. Always remember how happy you were at N.C.C.S. C! and the memory will help you through many a bleak moment.

Lily -
I thought it would be appropriate to sign your yearbook here, because that's always been my impression of you - active. You've also shown an eager, quick spirit, a ready smile, and an ever present word of encouragement. I know you have been and always will be a great help to everyone around you. Even though I won't be here next year, I'll always remember you and with great affection. Always remember how happy you were at N.C.C.S. C! and the memory will help you through many a bleak moment.

Dear Lily,
It is very presumptious of me to sign myself on the page with so Maddy who is so eloquent. However, I must sit myself here in the middle of the book to observe you next year, I wish I really could but I have faith you'll succeed in everything just by being you. I Bon : giggle too much in Bible, you amuse people like me too much.
love, Anyo Bozeno
Dear Lily,
We've certainly had some very together times can't we remember that time, when we took that long walk — and you with no boots in the middle of a snow storm. I wonder what would have happened if we had been caught. Oh, well we've certainly made it well together. Thanks am awfully bi for everything and wrong telling my hair.
Much love,
Debbie

LIBRARY COUNCIL

On Wednesday there's a meeting,
Many things are to be done—
Reading lists throughout the summer
"Get them out please, everyone!"

Tea with lemon, milk, or sugar,
Cookies topped with nuts and cream,
Books galore—The best ones ever!
Couldn't dream a better dream!

"Your pennies won't be wasted
If you use them wise and well,
For the auction that is coming
Has many books to sell."

Silence reigns, each room in order;
Books and tables neatly placed
'57 now has ended,
And a new year's to be faced.

Council's job had been rewarding,
And we thank them, one and all!
Library doors will be thrown open
To new faces in the fall.

Choices! Choices!
What a chore . . .
Tis a choosing
I abhor!
Which is better?
Help! Indeed!
Mr. Freeman's
Hand I need!

You're an upper-classman now! How does it feel?? We had alot of fun on dummy first semester (Linda's pants, etc.) It's been wonderful having you for a friend, even though we saw each other just once in awhile toward the end of the year. Wait till next year!
